Sex and Age Variation in the Anal Scute of the Leopard Tortoise, Geochelone Pardalis, In Serengeti National Park, Tanzania

Author(s)

Jonathan Kabigumila

Abstract

Presents a study which observed the carpace length and width of the anal scute of the leopard tortoise in the Serengeti National Park in Tanzania to determine how the dimensions were related and if the relationship was sexually dimorphic. Methods; Results; Discussion. Presents a study which observed the carpace length and width of the anal scute of the leopard tortoise in the Serengeti National Park in Tanzania to determine how the dimensions were related and if the relationship was sexually dimorphic. Methods; Results; Discussion.